AMF Household Savings Newsletter - No. 30 - October 2018

This issue of the letter of the Households Savings Observatory Newsletter of the AMF is dedicated to the findings of the qualitative study commissioned by the AMF on the readability of commercial and regulatory documentation surrounding the structured products. The main finding is that if accurate and not misleading information is achieved, it is not the case for the purpose of clarity. The letter lists practices that hinder the readability of the documentation and those that make it easier.
