Second AMF/ACPR report on the monitoring and evaluation of climate-related commitments of financial institutions in Paris (in French only)

This report analyses the commitments made by financial institutions in Paris in relation to climate issues and the implementation of recommendations published in 2020 by the authorities. After publishing a pre-report at the end of October 2021 on fossil fuel sectoral policies and initial estimates of the exposure of financial actors to these sectors, the two authorities also examine in this final report shareholder engagement policies and the role of collective initiatives to which financial institutions adhere, in particular for their "net zero" commitments. The difficulties identified in the assessment of asset managers' exposure to the oil and gas sector are also outlined. The authorities call for accelerated work in this area.
